MCHALE'S ELECTRICAL NEWS

ELECTRICAL SAFETY 101 DON'T BE A SHOCKING STATISTIC DO IT RIGHT

Thousands of people in this country are seriously injured each year because of electrical accidents and electrical fires. Most of these can be prevented by safe electrical practices. Here are a few electrical safety tips from ABC Electrical:

- Major appliances like refrigerators, washers and dryers, stoves, etc. should be plugged into wall outlets.
- If you need an extension cord for a major appliance, make sure it's an appliance extension cord.
- Consider arc fault circuit interrupters (AFC's) for your home. AFC's shut down electricity when a dangerous condition occurs; for example, when outlets or circuits are overloaded.
- Use ground fault circuit interrupters (GFC's) in your bathrooms, kitchen, laundry room, garage and outdoor locations where you have access to water.
- Test AFC's and GFC's once a month to make sure they're working properly.
- You should have smoke alarms on every level of your home, inside each bedroom and outside each sleeping area. Replace batteries once a year, and smoke alarms every ten years.
- Never use an extension cord that's damaged, and don't use a cord that feels hot. Extension cords can overheat if what you've plugged in draws more current than the extension cord can carry.
- Schedule an electrical safety inspection to identify and correct potential electrical hazards in your home.

IS YOUR HOME'S ELECTRICAL SUPPLY ABLE TO MEET YOUR DEMAND?

The electric requirements for today's modern appliances and devices keep going up, and the electrical system in many homes may not be able to meet these new demands. For example, newer homes have 30 to 40 circuits, supplying the electrical power needed to enjoy home entertainment centers, microwaves, coffee machines and many other modern conveniences. A home built in the 1970s, however, may have only 12 circuits to serve the entire house. Many of these homeowners are plugging thousands of dollars worth of electronics into a panel that may not be able to safely serve and protect them. A common sign that a home is drawing more electricity than the electrical system can safely distribute is frequent circuit breaker tripping and flickering lights. If you're experiencing these signs it's time to increase the capacity of your home's electrical service panel. Call McHales — we're experts in all electrical upgrades, service and repairs.
